COUNTDOWN TO THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

It is now just three weeks to the General Assembly on 23 October in Mumbai and we are really looking forward to meeting up with our Adhering Body colleagues from around the world and hearing about your activities since Dublin in 2016!

Adhering Body contacts and voting delegates should have this week received a Notice by email for the formal part of the General Assembly meeting which takes place from 13:00pm on 23 October. This is important because this is when we will be asking you to approve the new Bylaws and ratify the elections of the new Governing Council members and appointments to the new committees.

But, in the next few days we will be sending you details and an agenda for the open part of the meeting which takes place in the morning on the same day with registration open from 8:30am. Here we hope you will join us to hear more about the Union's activities and plans. We have presentations from most of the new committees and are planning for these to be interactive sessions. We will provide plenty of opportunities for you to ask questions and offer your views and suggestions.

If you are unsure whether you have received your formal Notice and Agenda for the General Assembly, please contact: secretariat@iufost.org.

We look forward to seeing you in just three weeks' time!

NEWS FROM THE IUFoST EARLY CAREER SCIENTISTS

The main activities of this year of the Early Career Scientists Section (ECSS) were the establishment of the Terms of References of ECSS; election of the Administrative Council of ECSS; and incorporation of the new membership article for the induction of new ECSS members. The election of the committee of the ECSS defined the new names that are going to administrate this IUFoST section for the next two years:

- President: Prof. Dr Anet Rezek Jambrak – Faculty of Food Technology and Biotechnology, University of Zagreb, Zagreb, Croatia
- Vice-President: Prof. Dr Brunna Boaventura - Federal University of Santa Catarina, Department of Nutrition, Santa Catarina, Brazil
- Secretary: Dr George Ooko - University of Nairobi, Department of Food Science, Nutrition and Technology, Nairobi, Kenya
- Members: Dr Azad Emin - Karlsruhe Institute of Technology, Institute of Food Process Engineering, Karlsruhe, Germany; and Prof. Dr Cornelia Rauh - Technical University of Berlin, Department of Food Biotechnology and Food Process Engineering, Berlin, Germany.

The mission of the ECSS is to promote the Academy's objective of raising the stature and recognizing outstanding achievements of the Food Science and Technology profession. We believe that this mission can be achieved by encouraging exceptional achievement by professionals in their early career, and by enhancing food science professionals through the ECS member network. In addition, the main purposes of this section include:

- Promoting dialogue and connectivity between the members of ECSS;
- Creating a network to improve personal and scientific communication among scientists in their early career and encouraging them to be nominated to ECSS;
- Fostering early career scientists to present their research, exchange their experiences and initiatives by organizing special events such as symposia, workshops and technical sessions at the World Food Congresses of IUFoST, and additional technical events at other national and regional conferences;
- Serving as a formal means of communicating the interests and concerns of early career scientists;
- Promoting mentorships with Fellows of the Academy;
- Acting as an ambassador of food science profession for the Academy at national and regional level with adhering bodies and other professional organizations.
